

Bulletin 05: Resignation of Registration

November 10, 2015

1.0 Introduction

1.1 Architects AIBC, Honorary Members, and associates (Intern Architects AIBC, Architectural Technologists AIBC, and Retired Architects AIBC) may choose to voluntarily resign their status for various reasons at different stages of their careers. This bulletin provides information to assist with making that transition.

2.0 Resignation Process for Architects

General

- 2.1 In accordance with Section 63 of the Act, a person who is not a registered architect of the AIBC may not use “architect”, the title “Architect AIBC” or use a similar description likely to lead the public to infer that the person is a registered architect. Please refer to AIBC Bulletin 32 for more information.
- 2.2 A person who is not a registered architect with the AIBC under the Act shall not practise or offer to practise the profession of architecture in this province, as set out in Section 59 of the Act. Such a person may only practise the profession of architecture as an employee working for and under the supervision of an Architect AIBC. Refer to AIBC Bulletin 31 for more information.
- 2.3 As per Section 34 of the Architects Act (the Act), architects in good standing may voluntarily resign from the AIBC in writing at any time. Please note that architects that choose not to renew their registration with the AIBC must resign in writing prior to the February 1 deadline for payment of annual renewal fees to be able to resign in good standing. If an architect chooses to resign part-way through the year after having paid their annual renewal fee, they will be eligible for a partial refund. The refund shall first be applied to any outstanding balance before refunding to the account holder. Please refer to Bulletin 01 for pro-rating schedule of fees.

- 2.4 Under Section 77(3) of the Act, an architect is required to return their professional seal and/or stamp to the AIBC upon resignation. If the seal has been misplaced or cannot be found, an undertaking letter will be required to be provided to the AIBC. This letter is to attest to the effect that despite the architect's best efforts the seal or stamp cannot be located, but if found it will be returned to the AIBC. Please refer to Section 06 of this bulletin for prescribed language of this undertaking letter.
- 2.5 Architects choosing to resign who also hold of a Certificate of Practice will be required to close their architectural firm by providing in writing an indication that the firm has met all professional obligations or to identify the Certificate of Practice holder that is assuming those obligations. The Certificate of Practice must be returned to the AIBC. If it has been misplaced or cannot be found, an undertaking letter will be required to be provided to the AIBC, to the effect that despite the architect's best efforts the certificate cannot be located, but if found it will be returned to the AIBC. Please refer to Section 06 of this bulletin for prescribed language of this undertaking letter. If the firm is a corporation, either a copy of the Certificate of Dissolution, the Certificate of Change of Name removing any reference to the term 'architect' (or whichever derivative is in the firm name), an amalgamation certificate, or evidence that it has been struck from the BC Registry Services, must be provided to the AIBC.
- 2.6 Architects choosing to resign that are partners or shareholders in an architectural firm must ensure that the firm submits an application for a change in the firm's structure using the appropriate application form. This must be approved by the AIBC prior to the architect's departure and the change of ownership structure of the firm.

Transfer to Retired Architect AIBC (Associate) Status

- 2.8 Retired architects enjoy the privilege and condition of this status to refer to themselves as Retired Architect AIBC. Retired architects will have their name kept on AIBC mailing lists for all regular mailings. Retired architects are generally eligible to sit on committees of the AIBC and may become Chapter members. As an associate, retired architects may not vote or hold office in the AIBC. Associates are required to comply with the Architects Act, AIBC Bylaws and the AIBC's Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct. Associates must follow specific notification requirements to clients and authorities having jurisdiction when they are providing independent design services for projects that do not require the services of an architect. Retired architects are not required to satisfy the requirements of the Continuing Education System; however, they are encouraged to maintain current knowledge of architectural practice if they plan to pursue reinstatement at a future date, or to provide design services for projects that fall below the thresholds set out in Section 60 of the Act.

Transfer to Affiliate Status

- 2.9 Architects choosing to become an affiliate will have their name kept on AIBC mailing lists for all regular mailings. Affiliates are not entitled to vote or hold office in the AIBC. Affiliates are not required to satisfy the requirements of the Continuing Education System. The AIBC does not have professional conduct jurisdiction over affiliates, as it does with respect to architects, associates, and other registrants.

Full Resignation

- 2.10 Architects choosing to fully resign will have their name kept on file internally only to indicate that they were once registered with the AIBC in the event of an enquiry regarding registration status or professional conduct. The AIBC will also retain the former architect's file in the event that an application for reinstatement is submitted. Former architects may opt-in to receive communications from the AIBC.

Resignation of Architects that are Honorary Members

- 2.11 Those architects who are also recognized as Honorary Members may resign their registration as an architect, or transfer to associate or affiliate status, without giving up their honorary membership. A continuing benefit of this honorary status is the right to use the description of "Honorary Member of the AIBC". Former architects that maintain their honorary status relinquish all professional obligations and practice rights as a registered architect. The Architects Act prohibits any person not registered as an architect from using the term "architect". AIBC Bylaw 10 prohibits the use of the title Architect AIBC by anyone other than a registered architect of the AIBC.

3.0 Resignation Process for Honorary Members of the AIBC

- 3.1 Honorary Members may voluntarily resign from the AIBC in writing at any time. Their name will be kept on file internally only to indicate that they were once registered with the AIBC. Former Honorary Members may opt-in to receive communications from the AIBC.

4.0 Resignation process for Associates

If an associate resigns part-way through the year after having paid their annual renewal fee they are eligible for a partial refund. The refund shall first be applied to any outstanding balance before refunding to the account holder. Please refer to Bulletin 01 for the pro-rating schedule. Architectural Technologists who have resigned are encouraged to maintain current knowledge of architectural practice if they plan to pursue reinstatement at a future date.
